

Building Healthy Presbyterates: It Starts in the Seminary

Join this virtual workshop for seminary administrators and faculty, including priests, deacons and lay persons, who have a role in promoting the human growth and development of the seminarians under their supervision.

Strong and healthy presbyterates depend on emotionally strong and healthy priests. The work of building resilience, emotional intelligence and strong character in priests begins in the seminary.

Matt Robinson, director of Clergy Support for the Diocese of Fall River, Massachusetts, has 15+ years walking with priests as a Diocesan Director of Clergy Support, parish employees, and seminarians.

He holds master's degrees in theology, psychology and business administration. He is a certified Change Management Specialist and holds a certificate in Church Management from Villanova University. He is the founder of The Shepherd Within LLC (theshepherdwithin.com), a professional coaching service dedicated to providing world-class human formation for priests and seminarians.
